INT. SPACEPORT TERMINAL - DAY

The bustling terminal is filled with travelers and crew members. ISLA DOMINGUEZ (early 30s, sharp eyes, practical attire) strides through the crowd, her expression focused.

She approaches a sleek cargo ship docked at the port.

ISLA
(under her breath)
Time to get this job done.

A hand suddenly grabs her wrist. She spins around to face MILO COLE (late 20s, warm smile), holding a small package wrapped in brown paper.

MILO
Isla! I almost missed you!

He hands her the package. She frowns slightly but takes it without protest.

ISLA
What's this?

MILO
Just something I thought you'd likehomemade cookies. You've been working non-stop lately; figured you could use a break.

Before Isla can respond, she hears an announcement over the PA system:

ANNOUNCER (V. O.)
Final boarding call for Flight XJ-427 to Vega Prime. All passengers please proceed immediately to Gate 9.

Isla glances toward the gate and then back at Milo with urgency in her eyes.

ISLA
I have to go nowcargo run waiting for me on Vega Prime. Thanks for the cookies!

Without waiting for his reply, she rushes off toward Gate 9.

INT./EXT VARIOUS SHOTS - MOVING

- A close-up of Isla's hand gripping a boarding pass tightly.
- The camera pans up as she steps onto the ship.
- The door seals shut behind her with a soft hiss.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE MOMENTS LATER

The bridge is dimly lit by control panels and holographic displays showing star maps and navigation data. ISLA enters briskly and approaches BLAISE FORD (mid-30s), standing near one of the consoles. Blaise turns smoothly when he notices Isla approaching. His expression shifts from casual interest to professional focus instantly. He gestures toward an empty seat beside him on command chair.

BLAISE FORD
Captain Dominguez! Ready for departure?

ISLA DOMINGUEZ
(sitting down)
Always am... But first any word on our secret passenger?

Blaise hesitates briefly before responding.

No updates yet He should be arriving soon though.

Suddenly, the main entrance opens, and JAMESON KAYE(strong build, dark hair slicked back neatly) walks in. Jameson nods respectfully towards both Blaise and Isla before turning his attention directly towards Isla.

JAMESON KAYE

Captain, I'm your security officer assigned specifically for this mission. I'll be handling all matters related to passenger safety during transit. Please let me know if there are any special requirements or concerns regarding onboard security protocols.

Isla raises an eyebrow slightly, sizing him up mentally. She remains calm, buther gaze lingers thoughtfully on Jameson's composed demeanor.

ISLA DOMINGUEZ

Security officer noted. You may begin your duties immediately. I expect full cooperation from everyone onboard. And remember, we're heading into uncharted territory beyond known space lanes. That means heightened risks. We must remain vigilant at all times.

Jameson nods firmly, in response. He then moves swiftly across bridge, taking position near airlock entrance while scanning surroundings carefully. Both Blaise and Isla follow closely behind him. Their expressions turn serious as they prepare for imminent departure into deep space

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - NIGHT

Isla stares at the flickering console, fingers hovering over controls. The ship hums softly around her.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, watching.

BLAISE
You're still chasing that signal?

ISLA
It's not just noise. There's a patternsomething deliberate.

BLAISE
Or it's interference from the nebula ahead. Waste of time.

ISLA
Maybe. But I'm not ignoring it again.

MILO enters quietly, holding a datapad with mission logs.

MILO
Captain, we've got an incoming message from Sector 9 command.

Isla turns sharply to Milo, eyes sharp but tired.

ISLA
Read it out loud.

MILO scans quickly then looks up with concern.

MILO
"Urgent: unidentified vessel detected near your route. Proceed with caution."

BLAISE smirks slightly but his eyes narrow on Isla's reaction.

BLAISE
Sounds like trouble found us first.

ISLA grips the armrest tightly and exhales slowly before standing straighter and facing them both fully now determination replacing doubt in her gaze.

EXT. SPACE - THE CARGO SHIP GLIDES PAST SWIRLING COSMIC CLOUDS AS DISTANT STARS BLINK COLDLY.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - MOMENTS LATER

Isla taps commands into the console; Blaise leans closer beside her while Milo watches from across the room nervously shifting weight between feet.

ISLA
Divert power to sensors and shieldsfull alert until we identify that ship or signal source.

Suddenly alarms beep sharply; red lights flash briefly on panels.

MILO
Signal strength spiked! It's coming closer fast!

The main screen flickers revealing a shadowy silhouette of another craft approaching rapidly through space dust.

BLAISE (QUIET)
Pirates? Or worse... corporate spies?

Isla clenches jaw but keeps steady voice:

6

No matter whatthey won't catch us off guard tonight.

INT. CARGO SHIP COMMON AREA - LATER

Isla sits alone sipping coffee when Milo approaches cautiously carrying two cups.

MILO
Thought you might need this after all that chaos...

He hands one cup to Isla who accepts without looking up immediately.

ISLA
Thanks... I just wish things were simpler sometimes.

Their eyes meet for a brief moment charged with unspoken understanding before Blaise appears at the doorway watching silently.

EXT. DEEP SPACE NEARBY THE CARGO SHIP CONTINUOUS

The mysterious vessel slows down suddenly then sends out a bright pulse toward Isla's shipa challenge or warning unknown yet ominous.

A sudden beep cuts through the silence.

ISLA
What now?

She taps a sequence; a cryptic signal pulses on screen.

MILO enters quietly, holding two steaming cups.

MILO
You've been at this for hours. Need a break?

ISLA
Thanks, Milo. But this signal... it's not random noise. Someone's trying to reach us.

BLAISE steps in from the side corridor, arms crossed, eyes sharp.

BLAISE
Or it could be interference messing with our systems again. You're chasing ghosts as usual.

ISLA shoots him a glare but doesn't respond immediately.

MILO sets down one cup beside Isla and leans closer to Blaise with an easy smile.

MILO
Maybe she's onto something we missed? Could be important if someone out there needs helpor worsewarning us about danger ahead.

BLAISE scoffs lightly but his gaze lingers on Isla's determined face longer than he admits aloud.

EXT. SPACE - THE CARGO SHIP DRIFTS AMIDST STARS

The ship glides silently toward an uncharted nebula glowing faintly in blue hues.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - LATER

Isla adjusts dials rapidly while Blaise watches skeptically; Milo stands near communications panel nervously tapping his foot.

ISLA
If I'm right, that pattern repeats every 47 secondsa code of some kind embedded in cosmic static.

BLAISE
Sounds like you want to chase trouble instead of delivering cargo on time.

MILO (SOFTLY)
Sometimes trouble finds you whether you're ready or not...

Suddenly alarms blare red lights flash across consoles.

COMMS VOICE (V. O.) distorted and urgent

This is Captain Rhea aboard Starliner Vega... distress beacon active... coordinates locked...

Isla freezes then punches buttons frantically trying to lock onto transmission source.

INT. PASSENGER QUARTERS - MOMENTS LATER

Isla storms inside where MILO waits by the door looking concerned; BLAISE follows behind more cautiously.

ISLA
That message came from somewhere closetoo close for comfort given our route changes last minute without explanation.

MILO
We should tell command before making any moves alone.

Before Isla can answer her comm crackles sharply another voice breaks through clearly:

PASSENGER VOICE (FILTERED)

BLAISE leans against the control panel, arms crossed, his tone skeptical but intrigued.

BLAISE
(frowning)
No one knows who Kira Valen really is. But if she's sending out distress signals... something's definitely off.

MILO steps closer to ISLA, his voice calm and reassuring.

MILO
(softly)
I'll check on her right away. You stay here and keep an eye on things.

He turns and exits quickly. BLAISE watches him leave before turning back to ISLA with a more serious expression.

BLAISE
(low, intense)
This isn't just about some random passenger anymore. Whoever Kira Valen is... we're running out of time to figure it outand fast.

Suddenly, the ship jolts violently from another impact. The lights flicker again as alarms blare throughout the bridge.

JAMESON (O. S.)
Captain! We've got incoming!

The main view screen shiftsanother unidentified vessel appears directly ahead of them in space, its hull dark and menacing under distant starlight.

Isla stands up immediately with authority as Jameson rushes onto the bridge behind her.

She grips the console tightly, eyes scanning for damage.

BLAISE
That wasn't a meteor strike.

KIRA moves closer, her face pale but determined.

KIRA
Captain! Something's wrong with the engines!

MILO rushes to check the systems, his fingers flying over controls.

MILO
They're malfunctioningmassive power surge in sector seven!

Everyone freezes. The room hums with tension as alarms blare softly in the background.

ISLA (COLDLY)
Whoever did this wants us dead or stranded. Find out what they wantnow!

12

Blaise steps beside her, his gaze sharp and calculating toward an external monitor showing their surroundings: only empty space behind them now, no sign of any vessel nearby except one directly aheadthe unmarked ship from before.

BLAISE

There's nothing behind us anymore...
Just that damned ghost ship up front.
He clenches his jaw slightly.
Then he turns back to Isla and Milo.
But it's not about chasing shadows anymoreit's about surviving whatever comes next.
Isla nods firmly at Blaise's words then suddenly she reaches into a drawer beneath her captain's chair and pulls out a sleek pistol-like weapon from within its custom foam cutout.
She stands tall and confident on the bridge floor facing everyone else who are all looking at her with surprise ready for action now!
Without hesitation she hands it off first Blaise then Milo each taking one weapon between them without breaking eye contact just waiting silently together side-by-side like soldiers preparing before battle.....

Suddenly another jolt hits through-out entire cargo bay area causing whole crew members including Kira stumble backwards momentarily losing balance briefly falling onto floor while trying regain footing quickly there after continuing performing respective duties amidst chaotic atmosphere surrounding inside spacecraft cabin compartments sections.....

ISLA
(gritting her teeth)
Ghost ship's engines are offline. That means they're not runningthey're drifting, waiting for us to make a move.

BLAISE
(coldly calculating)
A trap then. They want us to panic and slip up.

Suddenly, KIRA rushes in from the hallwayher face pale but determined.

KIRA
Isla! I've found something you need to see!

ISLA
(raising an eyebrow)
What is it?

14

Kira doesn't answer immediately. Instead, she pulls out a handheld device and taps furiously on its screen. The holographic map projects into the air between themshowing their position relative to the ghost ship ahead.

KIRA
(pointing at the display)
Look heretheir drift pattern isn't random. It's deliberate... like they're trying to herd us somewhere specific.

MILO leans in closer, his brows furrowing as he studies the data.

MILO
That changes everything If we can decode their intentions based on that trajectory

Before Milo can finish, a sudden alarm blares through the bridgea red warning light flashing urgently above them.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - NIGHT

Isla stares at the flickering console, fingers hovering over controls.

A sudden sharp BEEP interrupts the quiet hum of engines.

She leans closer to a new signal flashing on the screen an encrypted cosmic pattern.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, watching coolly.

BLAISE
You're still chasing that ghost signal? It's probably just space debris interference.

ISLA
(sharp)

16

It's not debris. The pattern repeats too precisely. Someoneor somethingis sending this intentionally.

MILO enters briskly from the corridor, carrying a datapad.

MILO

I ran diagnostics on the comms array. No faults detected. If it's deliberate, we should decode it fastcould be important for our route safety.

ISLA looks between Blaise and Milo; tension thickens in the cramped bridge space.

BLAISE

(skeptical)

Or it could be a trap. We don't know who else is out here listening in.

ISLA taps rapidly on her console, pulling up decryption algorithms as she talks without looking away from the screen:

ISLA

Either way, I'm not ignoring this until I know what we're dealing withespecially with that passenger acting so secretive about their mission parameters...

MILO steps closer to Isla's side quietly:

MILO

Let me help you crack itI've got some experience with alien codes from my last assignment. Two heads better than one?

Isla hesitates but nods slightly; Blaise watches them both carefully but says nothing.

EXT. SPACE - THE CARGO SHIP FLOATING AMIDST STARS

INT. CARGO SHIP PASSENGER QUARTERS - LATER

Isla knocks softly before entering Milo's small cabin where he is already bent over his datapad surrounded by floating holograms of code sequences and star charts.

ISLA
Any luck?

MILO looks up briefly then back down at his work:

MILO
This isn't any known language or tech signature... But these repeating pulsesthey match a distress beacon format used centuries ago by lost colonies near Sector 9-Gamma

He points to a blinking red dot on his holo-map far beyond their current course line.

ISLA
So someone out there might really need helpand they want us involved?

Before Milo can answer, Isla's communicator buzzes urgently.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - MOMENTS LATER

Back at command center: Blaise answers quickly; Isla listens nearby tense and alert.

Blaise frowns deeply but keeps calm:

BLAISE

ISLA (FIRM)
We don't have a choice. If we can't figure out where these signals are coming from, we're dead in the water.

Blaise leans against the control panel, arms crossed, watching her closely.

BLAISE
I still think this whole thing is just static interferencenothing more than cosmic noise messing with your sensors.

Isla turns sharply to him, eyebrow raised in disbelief.

ISLA
You really think I'd risk my ship on a "maybe" signal?

BLAISE
Enough drama already! Let Captain Cole handle piloting dutiesthat's what he was hired for!

He shoots Milo an approving glance before folding his arms smugly across his chest like some arrogant king surveying peasants

Milo doesn't flinch; instead he calmly meets Isla's gazeand then looks directly at Blaisewith quiet authority:

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - NIGHT

Isla stares at the flickering console, fingers hovering over controls. The cosmic signal pulses againstrange, rhythmic.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, watching coldly.

BLAISE
Still picking up that pattern?

ISLA
Yeah. It's... different this time. Like it's trying to say something.

37

MILO enters quietly from the rear hatch, holding a datapad.

MILO

I ran some scans on the signal archive. Nothing matches exactlybut it's close to an old distress beacon code from Sector 9X.

ISLA

Distress? That could explain why our passenger is so urgent about rerouting here.

BLAISE steps forward sharply.

BLAISE

We don't have time for detours chasing ghost signals. We stick to schedule or we lose contract credibilityand money.

ISLA turns toward Blaise with a firm gaze but doesn't argue yet.

ISLA

Maybe this isn't just a ghost. Maybe it's connected to what she needs us forthe secret passenger's mission isn't random after all.

MILO leans in beside Isla, voice low and warm.

MILO

If there's even a chance someone out there needs help I say we check it out together. We can handle whatever comes next as a team.

Isla glances between Milo and Blaisetension thickens in the cramped bridge airspace like static electricity before lightning strikes.

EXT. CARGO SHIP DECK - LATER

38

The ship drifts closer toward an uncharted asteroid field glowing faintly with bioluminescent minerals beneath dark space dust clouds.

INT. PASSENGER QUARTERS - SAME TIME

Isla knocks lightly on the door of their mysterious passenger's cabinno answer at first; then soft footsteps approach.

PASSENGER (O. S.)
Come in.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - CONTINUOUS

The door slides open revealing LYRAa calm but intense woman mid-30s with sharp eyes scanning star charts projected holographically around her small room.

LYRA
You're still considering following that signal?

ISLA
It feels important... more than just coincidence now.

LYRA sighs deeply and gestures toward one chart showing fragmented coordinates overlaying known trade routes and wreckage sites.

LYRA
That signal marks my brother's last transmission before he vanished years ago near here... If we find himor what happenedit changes everything about my mission... and maybe your journey too.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE MOMENTS LATER

Isla returns quickly; Blaise watches her closely while Milo waits expectantly by navigation controls.

ISLA
She wants us off courseto find her brother lost somewhere near those asteroids...

BLAISE scoffs but his jaw tightens.

BLAISE
Risky gamble when every minute counts against us financiallyand politically if word leaks out we're chasing myths instead of cargo contracts.

MILO looks at Isla earnestly.

MILO
Sometimes risks pay off bigger than contracts ever will.

Isla exhales slowly decision weighing heavy then nods firmly.

ISLA
We follow the signalfor Lyra and for ourselves.

INT. STARSHIP AURORA - BRIDGE - NIGHT

Isla sits tense at the pilot console, eyes flicking between blinking instruments and a cryptic signal pulsing on the radar.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, watching silently.

ISLA
(quiet)
The signal's stronger now. It's not random noise.

BLAISE
(cool)
Could be interference from a nearby star cluster. Nothing to worry about.

ISLA
(shaking head)
No. This pattern... it repeats every 42 seconds exactly. That's deliberate.

MILO enters briskly, holding a datapad with urgency in his step.

MILO
Isla, you need to see thisthere's an encrypted message embedded in that signal. Someone wants us to hear it.

ISLA looks up sharply at Milo then back at Blaise for confirmation.

BLAISE
(skeptical)
Encrypted? On our route? Sounds like trouble we don't need right now.

ISLA ignores him and taps commands rapidly on her console until decoded text appears:

41

"HELP US BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE."

Her breath catches; Milo leans closer over her shoulder, concern etched deep on his face.

EXT. STARSHIP AURORA - DEEP SPACE

The ship glides through dark space toward a distant glowing nebula where the signal originates.

INT. STARSHIP AURORA - COMMON AREA - LATER

Isla paces nervously while Blaise cleans tools methodically nearby; Milo watches Isla with quiet support but says nothing yet.

(uneasy)
If this is some kind of trap... I'm responsible for everyone aboard this shipincluding you two idiots who won't listen sometimes!

BLAISE
(flat)
I'm listening just finejust not convinced we should chase ghosts out here in the void.

MILO steps forward gently toward Isla, voice calm but firm:

MILO
We can't ignore it either waynot when someone might be counting on us.

INT. STARSHIP AURORA BRIDGE MOMENTS LATER

Isla stares down coordinates blinking red on the nav screen they're close enough now to scan deeper into the nebula cloud

SUDDENLY: The ship shudders violently as external sensors spike alarms blaring loudly.

BLAISE
(grabbing controls)
Brace yourself! Something's locking onto us!

ISLA grips armrests tight as warning lights flash wildly around them.

MILO
(yelling over alarms)
It's not an attackit's a beacon! They want contact!

BLAISE
If you insist on risking your life for a stranger... fine. But don't expect me to come running if something happens.

He turns and strides off without another word.

Milo watches Blaise leave, then quickly moves to stand beside Isla, concern etched across his face.

MILO
Captain are you sure? That alien ship is too far out of our communication range. We won't be able to reach you if anything goes wrong!

Isla stands up straight, meeting Milo's gaze firmly but kindly.

ISLA
Don't worry about me, Milo. You stay here and keep the ship safeand watch over Lyra while I'm gone.
She pauses for a moment before adding softly:

ISLA (CONT'D)
And please take better care of yourself these days. You've been pushing too hard lately.
Milo nods solemnly in acknowledgment as Isla walks toward the airlock door on the bridge side

LYRA (O. S.)
Captain! Wait!

Lyra rushes into view from behind some equipmenther eyes wide with panic as she grabs Isla's arm tightly

LYRA (CONT'D)
Please don't go! If something happens to you I'll never forgive myself!
Isla crouches down instinctively and gently strokes Lyra's hair

ISLA
SweetheartI promise I'll be back soonI won't let anything happen to me.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, expression unreadable.

BLAISE
Still no clue what it means?

ISLA
Not yet. But whatever it is... it's not random noise.

MILO enters briskly, holding a datapad glowing with new readings.

MILO
I cross-checked the frequencies. It's definitely artificiallike a beacon or a warning.

Isla looks up sharply at Milo, then back to Blaise who shrugs coolly.

ISLA
If someone out there wants us to find them why now? And why hide on my ship?

BLAISE
Maybe your secret passenger knows more than she's letting on.

ISLA
(quiet but firm)
She hasn't said a word since we left orbit. That silence feels heavier every hour.

Suddenly the ship shuddersa minor tremor rattles instruments and lights flicker briefly.

MILO rushes to monitor panel, fingers flying over controls.

46

That was external... something just passed close by without warning!

ISLA steps forward quickly toward viewport; outside stars blur as if something massive zoomed past unseen in shadows of space dust clouds.

BLAISE moves beside Isla calmly but his eyes narrow with suspicion and concern alike.

EXT. CARGO SHIP EXTERIOR - CONTINUOUS

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - MOMENTS LATER

Isla clenches fists on console edge; adrenaline sharpens her voice despite exhaustion creeping in.

ISLA
We can't keep running blind herenot when whoever sent that signal might be tracking us now.

MILO
Then we need answers fastor this mission ends before it really begins.

Blaise finally breaks his silence with low intensity:

BLAISE
I'll take first watch tonightkeep an eye for anything else unusual while you two rest.

Isla hesitates but nods reluctantly; Milo shoots Blaise a grateful glance as he heads off bridge quietly.

Before she can finish, the intercom crackles to life with Blaise's voice calm but commanding:

BLAISE (V. O.)
Isla, open this cargo bay door immediately!

The passenger stiffens at once, eyes darting nervously toward Isla as he steps back into the shadows of the cargo bay.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, watching coldly.

BLAISE
Still no pattern?

ISLA
Not yet. But it's definitely not random noise.

MILO enters briskly from the rear corridor, holding a datapad.

MILO
I ran diagnostics on the passenger's encrypted comms. Found something oddlooks like a hidden distress beacon embedded in their message stream.

Isla glances up sharply.

ISLA
That explains why they're so desperate to reach that sector. We need to find out who sent itand why before we get pulled into whatever this is.

Blaise steps forward abruptly and taps Isla's console with impatience.

BLAISE
We can't waste time chasing ghosts. Our cargo contract doesn't cover detours for mystery signals or secret passengers' side missions.

50

ISLA (FIRM)
This isn't just some ghostit could be a trap or worse if we ignore it. I'm taking us in closer for better scans despite your objections.

Milo nods encouragingly at Isla while Blaise scowls but says nothing more for now.

EXT. CARGO SHIP - OUTER HULL VIEW - CONTINUOUS

The ship shifts course toward an uncharted asteroid belt where the signal grows stronger.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - MOMENTS LATER

Alarms beep softly as proximity warnings flash red on screens.

ISLA (TO BLAISE)
Slow down! We don't want to scrape hull plating on debris fields because you rushed me off course!

Blaise clenches his jaw but eases back throttle reluctantly.

Suddenly, static bursts through speakers followed by a faint voice crackling:

DISTRESS VOICE (V. O.)
Help... trapped... life support failing...

Isla freezes then grips controls tighter.

MILO (URGENT)
That has to be our source! It matches the beacon signature exactly!

Blaise looks conflicted but finally nods grimly toward Isla.

51

BLAISE
Fine... let's see what this really is before you get us all killed.

INT. PASSENGER QUARTERS LATER

Isla confronts their mysterious passengera shadowed figure pacing nervously near viewport starscape.

MILO
No signs of life for years. Whatever happened here is ancient history.

BLAISE (UNEASY)
And yet we're still picking up that distress signal. Something's off.

Suddenly, a flicker of movement darts past them in the shadows. All three spin aroundno one there.

ISLA (TENSE)
We're not alone...

They move deeper into the station. The walls are rusted, lights flickering erratically as they pass through narrow corridors lined with broken consoles and shattered glass panels. A sudden static burst crackles over their commsthen dead silence again.

BLAISE

MILO (EXAMINING CONSOLE)
This was once a major command hub but why send an SOS after all these years?

ISLA (FROWNING AT HER SCANNER)
Wait... my sensor just picked up something moving behind that wall!

She gestures toward a section where part of the surface looks slightly differentless corroded than everything else around it.

ISLA (CONT'D)
There! That panel isn't like the rest!

Before anyone can react, she rushes forward and slams both hands against it hard enough to make her palms stingbut nothing happens.

ISLA (CONT'D)
It won't budge...

MILO steps beside her calmly.
He takes hold of Isla's wrists gently but firmly,

MILO Don't force it like that

The signal's stronger again. It's... pulsing faster.

BLAISE

(CALM)

Could be interference. Or someone trying to get our attention.

ISLA

(SKEPTICAL)

Or a warning we can't ignore.

MILO enters quietly from the rear corridor, carrying two steaming mugs.

MILO

(OFFERING ONE)

Coffee? You look like you're about to warp into another dimension just staring at that screen.

Isla takes it gratefully but doesn't relax.

65

Thanks. I wish this was just a glitch instead of something real and urgent inside that signal.

BLAISE steps closer to the console, tapping a few commands rapidly. The screen shiftscryptic symbols flash briefly before vanishing again into static noise.

BLAISE

Whatever it is... it's coded deep. Someone doesn't want us decoding this easily.

MILO leans on the edge of Isla's seat, lowering his voice slightly as he glances between them both with concern mixed with warmth in his eyes.

MILO

You've been pushing yourself too hard since we picked up that passenger. Maybe Blaise has a pointwe need more data before jumping to conclusions here.

ISLA pulls back from the controls sharply and looks directly at Milo for support.

ISLA

(FIRM)

No time for second-guessing now. If this passenger's mission depends on what we find in these signals I have to keep going.

Suddenly an alert flashes red: "UNAUTHORIZED ACCESS DETECTED."

BLAISE steps closer to the controls and taps rapidly on the panel.

BLAISE

We should run diagnostics on our comms array. Could be interference or sabotage.

He glances at Isla sharply.

BLAISE (CONT'D)

You sure you're not letting your imagination run wild?

ISLA meets his gaze steadily, unflinching despite his tone.

ISLA

I'm sure enough to keep us alert. This ship isn't just drifting through space anymoresomething's coming with that signal.

Suddenly an alert blares red lights flash across the cockpit panels.

MILO leans over Isla's shoulder to read: "UNAUTHORIZED PASSENGER DETECTED."

ISLA frowns and hits a button to open surveillance feed on main screen: A shadowy figure moves stealthily down one of the cargo bays corridors below deck.

ISLA (URGENT)

Whoever that isthey shouldn't be here!

BLAISE grabs his sidearm from its holster and heads for the door without hesitation.

BLAISE

70

I'll handle this quietly before things get messy. Stay here and monitor communications

MILO cuts him off with a firm hand on Blaise's arm as he passes by.

MILO

No way you go alone into unknown dangerand leave Isla stuck here guessing what happens next!

Isla looks between them both; tension crackling in charged silence.

Not again...

She taps a sequence. The screen flashes an encrypted message.

BLAISE steps in, arms crossed, watching her work.

BLAISE
You're chasing ghosts with those signals. We should focus on the cargo run.

ISLA
(firm)
These signals could be more than noise, Blaise. I'm not ignoring protocol just following leads.

MILO enters from the corridor, carrying two steaming cups of synth-coffee.

MILO
(offering one to Isla)
Maybe you need a break before you crack that code into oblivion?

Isla accepts it gratefully but keeps eyes on the screen.

ISLA
Thanks... Milo. But this might be importantsomething's trying to reach us out there.

Blaise scoffs quietly but doesn't argue furt her as he leans against a panel nearby.

Suddenly, static bursts through the comms channela voice barely audible and urgent:

VOICE (V. O.)
Help... coordinates locked... danger imminent...

73

Isla freezes for a beat then grabs headset fast.

ISLA
This is Pilot Dominguez. Identify yourself!

Static swells louder; then cuts off abruptly leaving only silence and blinking red lights on her console.

EXT. STARSHIP ORION - SPACE

The ship drifts near an uncharted asteroid belt shimmering faintly under distant stars.

INT. STARSHIP ORION - COCKPIT - CONTINUOUS

Milo moves closer to Isla's side; Blaise scans external sensors rapidly with growing concern.

MILO

Could be interference. Or someone trying to jam us.

MILO
Or maybe it wants to talk. You ever think of that?

ISLA shoots Milo a quick glance but keeps focused on the readings.

ISLA
If it is communication, we need to decode it fast. Whatever this passenger brought onboardit's tied in somehow.

BLAISE steps closer, voice low but firm.

BLAISE
You're pushing too hard without backup. We don't know what we're dealing with yet.

85

ISLA meets his gaze steadily.

ISLA
And waiting could get us killed or stranded out here forever. I'm not letting fear slow me downnot now.

INT. STARSHIP VESPER - COCKPIT - NIGHT

Isla stares at the flickering console, fingers hovering over controls. The cosmic signal pulses againstronger this time.

BLAISE leans against the doorframe, arms crossed, watching her.

BLAISE
Still chasing ghosts in space?

ISLA
It's not a ghost. Something's out there. And it's getting closer.

MILO enters quietly from the rear corridor, holding two steaming mugs.

MILO
You need a break before you burn out your circuits.

He hands Isla a mug; she accepts with a tired smile.

ISLA
Thanks, Milo. I just wish these signals made sense instead of static noise and interference.

BLAISE steps forward, eyes sharp on the readings.

BLAISE
Or maybe someone doesn't want us to understand them. Could be sabotage or worsea trap waiting for us somewhere ahead.

ISLA frowns but nods slowly, tension rising in her jawline as she sips coffee carefully.

EXT. STARSHIP VESPER - SPACE

The ship glides silently through an asteroid belt shimmering under distant stars. A faint glow pulses intermittently near the horizona mysterious beacon matching Isla's signal pattern appears briefly then fades away into darkness again.

INT. STARSHIP VESPER - PASSENGER QUARTERS - LATER

Isla knocks lightly on MILO'S door before entering without waiting for an answerhe looks up surprised but pleased to see her.

ISLA
I'm starting to think that passenger we picked up isn't just running from something... they're leading us somewhere dangerous.

MILO sets down his datapad and gestures toward his chair.

MILO
Dangerous or notwe don't get off course nownot when answers are this close.

Their eyes meetcomforting yet charged with unspoken worries about what lies ahead.

INT. STARSHIP VESPER BRIDGE MOMENTS LATER

Isla returns to find BLAISE already recalibrating sensors aggressively toward where the beacon last appeared.

BLAISE
We'll follow itbut cautiously this time no surprises like last jump.

Suddenly alarms blarethe ship shudders violently as external lights flicker.

Isla stares at the flickering console, fingers hovering over controls. The cosmic signal pulses againstrange, rhythmic.

BLAISE leans against the doorframe, arms crossed.

BLAISE
Still picking up that ghost signal?

ISLA
Yeah. It's not random noise. Someone's sending a pattern.

MILO enters from the corridor, carrying two steaming cups.

MILO
Maybe it's a distress call? Or a trap.

He hands Isla a cup; she accepts with a tired smile.

ISLA
A trap would explain why our passenger is so jumpy lately.

106

BLAISE steps closer to the main screen, eyes sharp as he studies data streams overlaying star charts.

BLAISE
If this is some kind of secret message... we're sitting on something big. Could be worth more than cargo credits.

ISLA looks between them, conflicted but resolute.

ISLA
We need to find out who sent it before someone else doesand fast.

Suddenly an alert blaresa warning flashes: UNAUTHORIZED ACCESS DETECTED IN CARGO BAY

MILO frowns and moves toward the hatch quickly but Isla grabs his arm gently to stop him for a moment of hesitation

ISLA
Waitlet me check first. Could be nothing... or worse if we rush in blind.

She taps commands rapidly; BLaise watches her closely with an unreadable expression.

INT. STARSHIP AURORA - CARGO BAY - MOMENTS LATER

Isla and Blaise enter cautiously; Milo follows behind scanning surroundings nervously with handheld scanner glowing faintly blue.

A shadow darts behind stacked crates Isla freezes then calls out softly:

ISLA
Who's there? Show yourself!

107

The figure steps forwardit's their SECRETIVE PASSENGER, clutching a small device pulsing like the signal upstairs.

PASSENGER
They're coming for this... I can't let them take itnot until you decode what it means.

from the static: it's the mysterious passenger's signal.

PASSENGER (V. O.)
Deciphered I'm here to protect her.

MILO (V. O., SHOCKED)
That voice... could it be?

He rushes to grab Isla's arm, but Blaise steps in front of them, shielding her instinctively.

BLAISE

The signal's stronger again. It's... pulsing faster.

BLAISE

110

(SKEPTICAL)

Could be interference from that nebula we passed. Nothing to worry about.

ISLA

(SHAKES HEAD)

No. This is deliberatelike a message. Someone wants us to hear it.

MILO enters briskly, holding a datapad glowing with encrypted codes.

MILO

I cracked part of the transmission. It's coordinatesoff-chart space near Theta-9 sector.

BLAISE

(FROWNING)

Off-chart? That area's off-limits for a reason. Dangerous territory.

ISLA looks between them, determination rising despite unease.

ISLA

We don't have a choice if this passenger's mission depends on itand I'm not turning back now.

BLAISE steps closer to Isla, voice low but firm.

BLAISE

ISLA

Then we'll make sure they don't find either one easily.

She turns away briefly then meets Milo who just arrived behind her; he offers a reassuring smile.

MILO

113

I don't like this. It feels... deliberate. Like someone wants us to find it.

MILO enters from the rear corridor, carrying a datapad.

MILO

Or warning us off. I ran diagnosticsnothing wrong with our systems. This is external interference.

Isla glances at Milo, grateful for his calm presence but distracted by Blaise's sharp gaze on her.

ISLA

(quiet)

We need to trace its source before it gets worse.

Suddenly an alarm blaresa red light pulses urgently on the main panel.

BLAISE

That's no glitchthe engine core just dropped ten percent power!

ISLA moves quickly to another console, fingers flying over controls as she frowns deeply.

ISLA

Someone's messing with our systems remotely... But who?

MILO leans close beside Isla, voice low and steady despite rising stakes.

MILO

Blaise and Milo work side by side amid humming machinery; sparks fly as they reroute power manually under Isla's direction via comms headset.

BLAISE
This was no accidentthey hacked into our system through that cosmic signal frequency itself!

MILO
Whoever did this knew exactly how vulnerable we'd be once we picked up their beacon...

Suddenly Blaise freezes mid-sentence as he notices something on his handheld scannera faint heat signature moving along a maintenance shaft nearby.

BLAISE
That anomaly again? You're chasing ghosts now?

ISLA
It's not just noise. There's a patternsomething intelligent.

Blaise scoffs but doesn't argue furt her.

MIL0 enters from the rear corridor, holding two steaming cups of synth-coffee.

MILO
You both look like you need this more than me.

He hands one to Isla; she accepts gratefully but keeps scanning data.

ISLA
Thanks. Blaise thinks I'm wasting time on space static.

MILO (SMILING)
Maybe it's worth chasing ghosts if they lead somewhere real?

Isla glances at Milo with a brief smile before turning back to her screen. Blaise watches them both silently for a beat then steps closer to Isla's side panel console and taps rapidly on it with surprising ease.

BLAISE
I'll run diagnostics on your sensors maybe there's interference messing with your readings.

ISLA (NODS)
Do it fast. If that signal is what I think it is... we don't have much time before someone else finds it first.

INT. STARSHIP VESPER - PASSENGER QUARTERS - LATER

Isla knocks lightly and enters Milo's room where he sits surrounded by star charts pinned everywhere, his face tense as he studies them under dim light.

ISLA
Any luck decoding those coordinates you found?

MILO looks up sharply but softens when he sees her concern mixed with exhaustion in her eyes.

MILO
They line up perfectly with that signal path you're tracking... It could be a hidden jump gate or an ancient relay station buried in dark space zones no one dares approach anymore.

ISLA exhales deeply and moves closer until their shoulders almost touch.

ISLA
If that station still works whoever controls it could change everything about deep-space traveland power balance out here.

MIL0
We'll figure this out together.

Isla hesitates, then nods reluctantly.

INT. STARSHIP ORION - PASSENGER QUARTERS - MOMENTS LATER

Isla enters quietly. The PASSENGER sits by a viewport, staring out into space.

ISLA
We need answers about those signals. What are you not telling us?

PASSENGER
(turning slowly)
I'm here because time is running outfor all of us. That signal is a warning... and a plea for help from my homeworld.

ISLA frowns, absorbing the weight of the revelation.

INT. STARSHIP ORION - BRIDGE - LATER

Isla returns with urgency in her step; Blaise and Milo look up immediately.

ISLA

138

It's worse than we thoughtthe signals come from an entire colony trapped beyond that nebula's edge... dying without aid.

BLAISE
(skeptical)
And what exactly do they expect us to do? Fly straight into a storm of cosmic radiation?

MILO
(softly)
Sometimes risks have to be taken if lives depend on it...

Isla meets Blaise's cold gaze but finds strength in Milo's steady support beside her.

EXT. NEBULA EDGE SPACE CONTINUOUS

The Orion approaches swirling clouds of glowing gas and electrical storms crackle ominously around them.

INT. STARSHIP ORION BRIDGE CONTINUOUS

Alarms blare suddenly as turbulence shakes the ship violently.

ISLA
(gritting teeth)
Hold tight! We're going through!

She grips controls tightly; Blaise moves swiftly to assist; Milo steadies himself near Isla.

EXT./INT MIXED SHOTS THE SHIP STRUGGLES THROUGH THE NEBULA'S FURY

Suddenly the ship stabilizes inside calmer space beyond the storm.

INT. STARSHIP ORIONBRIDGE AFTER STORM CALMS

139

Silence falls except for soft breathing and blinking consoles.

MILO
(smiling faintly)
You did it You got us through this hellscape alive.

BLAISE
(nods once grudgingly)
Not bad pilot Not bad at all.

ISLA
(quiet confidence growing)
This isn't over yetwe still have people counting on us ahead.

She turns toward navigation screen where new coordinates pulse urgentlya beacon waiting ahead.

EPISODE 56

INT. STARSHIP ORION BRIDGE DAY

Isla stands at the helm, her hands steady on the controls.

ISLA
Set course for that beacon. We're going to help them.

Blaise crosses his arms, leaning against the console with a smirk.

BLAISE
You really think you can just waltz in and save everyone? This nebula's a death trapno one gets through it alive.

Isla turns to him, calm but firm.

ISLA

140

Then someone needs to prove otherwise. And I'm not about to let fear stop me from trying.

Milo steps closer, sliding an arm around her waist gently.

MILO

She's right. If anyone can navigate this mess, it's Islaand I'll be by her side every step of the way.

Blaise sighs dramatically but lets out a reluctant chuckle as he taps commands into his panel.

BLAISE

Fine Course set. But don't come crying when we get swallowed whole by cosmic storms or radiation bursts!

He walks off with exaggerated flair toward another part of the shipthe bridge doors hiss shut behind him.

Milo leans in closer, brushing his lips lightly against Isla's cheek before stepping back slightly and looking at her expectantlywaiting for something more intimate between them

SUDDENLY

The control panels flicker violently; warning lights flash red across the bridge as alarms blare through the rooma deafening roar filling their ears

EXT./INT. STARSHIP ORION VARIOUS LOCATIONS

The ship shudders violently; systems spark and sputter under unseen pressure

141

A massive energy surge explodes outward from withinthe entire vessel shaking like thunder itself has taken hold inside its core!

EPISODE 57

INT. STARSHIP ORION BRIDGE MOMENTS LATER

The ship shudders violently. Sparks fly from the control panels, alarms blaring.

ISLA (SHOUTING OVER THE NOISE)

What's happening?!

BLAISE

The energy surge knocked out our shields! We're exposed!

MILO (URGENTLY)

Isla, we need to get out of this nebulanow!

ISLA (FIRMLY)

I'm not leaving until I know what that signal means.

She slams her fist onto the console, eyes blazing with determination.

SUDDENLY

A DEAFENING EXPLOSION rocks the bridge. The crew is thrown off balance.

Isla staggers but catches herself quickly, gripping the railing as loose wires spark around her feet.

ISLA (CONT'D)

142

Everyone hold steady!

She turns sharply toward BRIAN at navigation controlshis face pale and strained under flickering lights.

BRIAN

Captain we've lost half our systems! There's no way to escape without a full rebootand it'll take time

Isla clenches her jaw tightly, fists trembling slightly before she steadies herself fully and nods firmly toward Brian with resolve in her eyes.)

ISLA

Then start now. Do it fastwe don't have much time left here...

Brian immediately begins working on restoring power while Isla watches him carefully as tension fills every corner of the room like thick smoke ready to ignite again any second now...

EPISODE 58

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - NIGHT

Isla stares at the flickering console, tension tightening her jaw.

BLAISE stands behind her, arms crossed, watching silently.

MILO enters briskly, holding a data pad.

MILO

The cosmic signal just spiked again. It's not random noise this time.

143

ISLA
(eyes fixed on screen)
It's like it's trying to tell us something... or warn us.

BLAISE
(cool)
Warnings don't come from space debris. We're chasing ghosts here.

ISLA
(turns sharply)
Maybe you're too busy chasing certainty to see what's right in front of you.

MILO steps closer to Isla's side, offering quiet support.

MILO
Let me run an analysis on the passenger's encrypted files again. There might be a clue there we missed.

ISLA nods gratefully but keeps eyes locked on the signal pattern pulsing across the monitor.

INT. CARGO SHIP PASSENGER QUARTERS - MOMENTS LATER

Isla knocks and enters without waiting for an answer. The SECRETIVE PASSENGER sits calmly amid scattered star charts and devices humming softly.

ISLA
We keep getting these signalsdo they have anything to do with your mission?

PASSENGER
(slight smile)
More than you realize. They are coordinates... leading somewhere vital for all of us out here in the void.

144

EXT. SPACE THE CARGO SHIP CONTINUOUS

The ship glides through dark starscape as distant lights pulse rhythmically nearby the mysterious source growing stronger.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - LATER

Isla inputs new coordinates rapidly while Blaise watches skeptically; Milo leans over her shoulder excitedly pointing at his tablet screen showing decoded fragments from passenger data matching signal patterns exactly.

BLAISE
You really trust this stranger enough to change course based on ghost signals?

ISLA
(firm)
I trust what I can't explain yet more than blind certaintyand that includes both of you sometimes.

Suddenly alarms beep sharply proximity warning flashing red across panels.

MILO
Something's closing fast!

They exchange tense looks as Isla grabs controls decisively.

EXT. SPACE NEARBY ASTEROID FIELD

A sleek unmarked vessel darts between asteroids toward them aggressivelyits intent clear: interception.

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE CONTINUOUS

145

Blaise moves swiftly beside Isla, fingers flying over controls preparing evasive maneuvers; Milo taps comm frequencies urgently trying contact with unknown ship but gets silence back only static crackle.

ISLA
(to Blaise quietly)
Ready when you arelet's show them why we're still alive out here.
Fade out

EPISODE 59

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE CONTINUOUS

Isla's fingers dance across the console, her eyes sharp as she locks onto the approaching vessel.

ISLA
(steady)
Milo, try again. Contact them now!

Milo leans in, his hands flying over the controls. The ship hums with tension.

MILO Cole Transmission: This is Commander Milo Cole of the Deep Space Cargo Ship "Star Runner." You are on a restricted pathplease identify yourselves immediately for clearance.

The unmarked vessel closes in rapidly no response.

BLAISE (O. S.)
They're not answering!

MILO
(frustrated)
Still nothing! They must be jamming their signal somehow...

146

ISLA
(calm but firm)
Prepare for evasive maneuvers. Blaise?

Blaise steps forward smoothly, taking control without hesitation. His expression shifts from calm to alert in an instant.

BLAISE FORD (V. O.)
Understood, Captain Dominguez.

He presses a series of buttons; thrusters flare as the cargo ship begins to pivot gracefully through space.

EXT. SPACE - THE UNMARKED VESSEL AND STAR RUNNER

The two ships move like dancers caught in a deadly waltz one evading and one pursuing with relentless precision.

END EPISODE 59

EPISODE 60

INT. CARGO SHIP BRIDGE - CONTINUOUS

The unmarked vessel closes in, its silhouette dark and imposing against the starry void.

MILO
(fuming)
Still no response? This silence is driving me crazy!

ISLA
(stern, focused)
Keep your eyes on the sensors. If they move any closer, we'll need to jettison cargo and make a hard jump.

147

Suddenly, the unmarked ship's lights flarethen cut out completely. The bridge plunges into darkness.

BLAISE
(alarm rising)
Power failure? What the hell

Before he can finish, a violent shudder rocks the Star Runner. Warning alarms blare as systems flicker erratically.

ISLA
(gritting her teeth)
They've disabled our core power! Emergency protocolsnow!

She slams her palm onto an emergency override panel. Lights snap back on with a dull hum of restored energybut only temporarily.

MILO
(shouting over chaos)
If they keep this up, we won't last five minutes!

BLAISE
(calm but tense)
Isla I suggest immediate evacuation procedures. We can't risk being boarded or caught in their trap.

ISLA
(resolute)
No wayI'm not abandoning my ship without a fight.

Her gaze sharpens toward one of the screens displaying sensor data: A faint signal pulse from deep within their own cargo hold.

148

She freezes for just a second longer than necessary before snapping back to reality.

Without hesitation:

She strides purposefully toward that section of the ship with Blaise close behind and Milo following at his usual distance.

EXT./INT VARIOUS SHIP LOCATIONS - MONTAGE (EP 60)

- Isla moves swiftly through corridors illuminated by soft blue lighting; crew members step aside respectfully as she passes without breaking stride.
- They reach an access hatch emblazoned with "CARGO BAY 7". She pulls it open without hesitation.
- Inside lies nothing but empty spacethe bay is completely hollow.
- Her face twists in confusion; she steps forward hesitantly.
- Suddenlya hand grabs her ankle from above. She lets out a shocked cry.
- A figure tumbles down into her arms. The impact sends both crashing heavily onto cold metal floor. Isla instinctively wraps around him tightly to protect them both. Both bodies collide awkwardly against rough surface. Of course this causes clothing disarray. A small zipper gives way under pressure. Their garments loosen furt her exposing more skin. Figure groans softly from beneath bodyweight. Isla blushes furiously. She covers herself hastily while pushing upward at his chest.

He rises too. His hands find hers. They lock together instinctively. Mouths meet briefly. Instinct takes over. They roll sideways across floor. Cargo bay echoes with muffled sounds of passion

INT. CARGO BAY 7 - LATER

The two lie side by side, catching their breath. The emergency lights cast a soft glow over their flushed faces.

ISLA
(softly, smiling)
Looks like we're safe at least for now.

BLAISE
(nods, relieved)
The power's stabilizing. I've rerouted the systems to prevent another shutdown.

MILO
(grinning)
And the unmarked ship? They're pulling away. Whatever their plan was, it's over.

Isla squeezes Blaise's hand, then Milo's.

ISLA
(quiet confidence)
We faced the threat togetherand we came through. This ship, this crew, this family we're stronger than any danger out there.

She looks out the viewport at the stars, calm and determined.

ISLA
(whispers)
Now, it's time to chart our own course. Fade out
